Surrounded by the sea and lush natural landscape, the farm is an oasis, brimming with idealistic notions and lively debate amongst Cass's father, stepmother, and their long-time friend of the family, Michael. But Joshua's warm welcome is short-lived, when a sudden act of violent racism at the local summer concert shatters the peace forcing Joshua and those around him to confront the uncomfortable truth of their differences.

A searing portrait of contemporary British society, THE BEACON is a meditation on family, class, race, belonging, and identity. This is a story that holds a mirror up to its audience, questioning what our values are, what we will do to stand up for them and what secrets we harbor even from those we love the most.

Synopsis: This observational documentary film follows Bobi Wine and his wife Barbie. Bobi rises from the ghetto slums of Kampala to one of the country's most loved superstars. His musical talent lifts him and emboldens millions of previously voiceless people. Bobi uses his music for activism, then becomes an Independent Member of Parliament to stand to defend the rights of his people, the ghetto people. Bobi's wife, Barbie, by standing with him, plunges her own life into uncertainty. The film is an examination of the disturbing misuse of the legal and parliamentary systems, two supposed pillars of democracy. The country's institutions are controlled by the State to ensure President Museveni, an autocratic strongman, who has held power since 1986, continues to rule Uganda. Bobi and Barbie must risk everything, their lives and their futures to challenge him. The state is determined to silence, not only them, but anyone who supports their cause. This is not just a story for Uganda, it is a narrative for all those who struggle under dictatorial regimes. Those who oppose them quickly discover that Western democracies have interests that do not extend to holding autocrats to account. This story has never been so relevant.

Copa '71

Genre: Documentary
Director: Rachel Ramsay
Status: Completed

Synopsis: It is August 1971. Football teams from England, Argentina, Mexico, France, Denmark and Italy are gathering at Mexico City's sun-drenched Azteca Stadium. The scale of the tournament is monumental: lavish sponsorship, extensive TV coverage, merchandise on every street corner and crowds of over 100,000 hollering fans turn this historic stadium into 'a cauldron of noise and heat' match after match. A fawning media treat the players like rock stars. The atmosphere is reminiscent of the greatest moments in international footballing history.

But this is a tournament unlike anything that's happened before. The players on the pitch are all women. And it's likely you've never even heard of it. This is Copa 71, the unofficial Women's World Cup. Dismissed by both FIFA and domestic football associations around the world, this event has been entirely written out of history. Until now.

Danger Zone

Genre: Documentary
Director: Vita Drygas
Status: Production

Synopsis: In the competitive world of tourism, there's very few experiences that are out of bounds. Danger Zone explores the world of war tourism, catering to a growing market for ever more rare and extreme experiences. Tourists are promised frontline action, with real ammo, real battles, and real danger.

War has become a luxury product, a commodity that can be bought and sold, and tour operators are desperate to get into the growing business. This morally ambiguous tourist industry leads to the collision of two very different worlds, between these thrill-seeking tourists and the people caught in the cross-hairs of conflict, who are not afforded the luxury and privilege of choice. Danger Zone asks: what are the tourists left with on reflection, is there a realisation of how lucky they are merely as a result of where they were born? Do those who inhabit conflict areas, through no choice of their own, perceive in these tourists a hope for a peaceful life? Or, is it purely a one-sided interaction where no one wins and no one learns?

Synopsis: Damon Hill's father was his hero. Graham was a two-time world champion and racing icon full of natural charisma, humour and vibrancy; he was a towering figure. This is the story of a son's life-long search to understand his father set against the backdrop of two fascinating, contrasting eras of the sport: the 1960-70's, a time of glamour and demi-gods, and the 1980-90's, a time of rivalry among men. This film tells how Damon wrestled with his father's legacy and how, through sheer determination, he forged himself into a champion and became the father he never had.

I Could Never Go Vegan

Genre: Documentary
Director: Thomas Pickering
Status: Completed

Synopsis: Born in the 1980's and raised vegetarian, before switching to a vegan diet, Tom Pickering has always believed he's been doing right by the animals, his own health, and - more recently - the planet. Despite this, he still can't go a day without hearing from others why they could never go vegan. From "where do you get your protein" and "soya is killing the rainforests" to "vegan food is expensive" and "climate change doesn't exist", he's heard it all. With no sign of these arguments against his lifestyle choice going away, Tom sets out to investigate the many reasons he's heard over the years, and see if they're unjustified, or whether his upbringing was one big plant based con.

On his journey Tom tracks down several top athletes, witnessing world records, championship successes and an 84-year-old taking part in his sixth ultra-marathon. He speaks to doctors, environmental scientists, psychologists and chefs. At the end of it all, Tom tries to piece together this complex picture as he finds a clear link between the way we treat animals, the effect it has on our planet, and our own health.

Cast: Martin Scorsese
Genre: Documentary
Director: David Hinton
Status: Post-Production

Synopsis: Directed by two-time BAFTA and Emmy winning David Hinton, this is Scorsese's personal and moving look at two of British cinema's greatest filmmakers. Producing, writing, and directing, Powell and Pressburger created some of the great classics of the British golden age including The Red Shoes, Black Narcissus, A Matter of Life and Death and The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp. In the words of Scorsese their films were "grand, poetic, wise, adventurous, headstrong, enraptured by beauty, deeply romantic, and completely uncompromising". This film will be an unparalleled exploration of their genius.

Scorsese will take the audience on a very personal journey as we hear how, from a young age he was captivated by their films, how they helped shape his own filmmaking and how a later friendship with Michael Powell left an indelible mark on his own life. Brought to life with a treasure trove of rare archival material from the personal collections of Powell, Pressburger and Scorsese, the story will be told using diaries, audio recordings, home movies, personal snapshots and of course the films themselves.

Synopsis: A blazing summer in post-war England. Robert is 16, the shy, nature loving son of a miner. Before he follows his father down the pit, he sets out to explore the countryside and see a little more of the world. He gets as far as Dulcie, a hard drinking, foul-mouthed, bohemian recluse several times his age. Under her eccentric tutelage, his life opens up to rich food, poetry, girls and the possibility that there may be more to living than duty and mining. But while Dulcie's cottage and garden by the sea are idyllic, this place holds a tragic secret about Dulcie's great love. When Robert discovers the truth, his brave and tender friendship compels Dulcie to open her own heart and re-engage with the world. Their encounter is a riotous clash of experience, personality and perspective which will leave them both forever changed.

He remains listed as missing in action to this day. The future of Europe hangs by a thread as the fierce battles rage in the skies over southern England. ## Welcome To The Darkness

Genre: Documentary
Director: Simon Emmett
Status: Completed
Synopsis: In 2003, British glam rockers The Darkness took the world by storm with their smash hit single "I Believe In A Thing Called Love". Then at the height of their fame, the band split up and fell into obscurity. Eight years after their breakup, director Simon Emmett follows The Darkness as they begin their long, rocky and hilarious comeback trail. From a small pub gig in the middle of nowhere with the ambition of returning to arena shows – this documentary shows the stark reality of a 'cult band' struggling to recapture former glory. With unprecedented access, unseen archive, and intimate interviews filmed over six years, Welcome To The Darkness is a tongue-in-cheek reflection on fame, failure, friendship and forgiveness. At its heart, this is a touching account of a unique band of brothers who are still haunted by the demons that ripped them apart in their heyday, yet who are also able to defiantly laugh in the face of adversities both old and new in their ultimate quest for happiness and redemption. 20 years on from their platinum-selling debut, Justin Hawkins, his brother Dan, eccentric bassist Frankie Poullain, and new drummer Rufus Taylor tell their story, in their own words, in their own image – a fabulous 'warts and all' comeback tale with characters who defy convention.

Once Tell's family has been threatened, there is no turning back. Tell not only commits to joining the resistance but ends up leading the fight against the Austrian forces.
